

Seacoast Village Project’s mission is to make “aging in place” a real choice.

Seacoast Village Project is a network of older adults working together to get smart, get connected and help each other out as they age in place in their homes and community.

Founded in 2018 and based on a national Village Movement model of neighbor-helping-neighbor, the Seacoast Village Project is dedicated to making “aging in place” a reality by supporting the social, educational and practical needs of older adults who live independently.

With Seacoast Village Project as their partner, older adults can actively participate in the communities they love as continue to live in their own homes.

The Village Movement

Seacoast Village Project is a member of the national Village to Village Network. Starting with Boston’s Beacon Hill Villages (founded in 1999), there are now more than 250 villages across the country with more than 100 others in development.
